WILSON ASKED BY POPE TO AID IN SECURING PEACE

Cardinal Gibbons Conveys Message From Pontiff to President.

BELIEVE PROSPECTS ARE GOOD

Settlement of Submarine Issue Between the United States and Germany Has Cleared the Way for Negotiations Planned to End War.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Cardinal Gibbons today presented to President Wilson a message from Pope Benedict regarding peace in Europe. Later he saw Secretary Lansing on the same subject. After his conference at the White House the cardinal announced that he had discussed the possibilities of peace with the President. He said that he had conveyed a message of the Pope on the question, but could not reveal its exact contents at this time.

Cardinal Gibbons declared that the settlement of the submarine issue between the United States and Germany had greatly aided the cause of peace and had placed the United States in a very advantageous position to prosecute peace negotiations.

He said he had informed the President he believed this to be true. While the cardinal would not go into details regarding his message from the Pope it was indicated that it was in the nature of a suggestion that neutral powers join with the Vatican in making further efforts to restore peace.

The cardinal said that the plan in mind was along the general lines of recent public discussion of the question in newspapers. After leaving the President the cardinal, his face wreathed in smiles, greeted inquirers and without being questioned said that he had discussed peace with the President.

"Our talk was highly satisfactory and I am very much pleased with my reception from the President," said the cardinal. "We went over the entire situation, but I cannot reveal the details of our conversation at this time. Probably more will be made public in the near future."

SUBMARINE WHICH SANK ARABIC IS NOW A PRIZE

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—An officer of the White Star liner Adriatic, which arrived from Liverpool today, declared that the German submarine which sank the Arabic had been caught in a steel net and the U-boats double crew were now prisoners in England.

He added that within the past 60 days the British have captured no less than 50 German submarines.

The officer said he could not, for obvious reasons, disclose the place of capture nor detail the circumstances. He said, however, that the U-boat was of the latest and largest type in the German navy and that the craft carried a double crew. He understands that the Germans man all the craft with an auxiliary crew for training purposes.

ALLIES CLAIM GAINS IN DARDANELLES OPERATIONS

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The British public has been greatly cheered by the version of the recent heavy fighting at the Dardanelles in the report received last night from General Sir Ivan Hamilton, the British commander-in-chief. This report has been awaited eagerly in view of the assertion in Constantinople that the Allies had been repulsed with heavy losses.

Sir Ivan claims that his forces operating on the northern section of the line captured an important tactical point commanding the Buyuk-Anafarta valley, to the east and north, as well as making an appreciable gain along the Australasian front.

If the British colonies now dominate Anafarta, their guns should have a clear field to fire upon one of the main Turkish supply roads leading toward Achi Baba. The Turks, however, have an alternative line of communication with this part of their front. Constantinople has admitted no advance on the part of the Allies.

The Russians are developing unexpected strength where they state they are not only holding Field Marshal von Hindenburg, but have gained a local success near Vilna. Various changes have been made in the Russian command, the most important being the return of General Ruesky to the leadership of the northern army.

Berlin wireless reports which are usually a day or two in advance of the Petrograd official communications, announce a reverse in the Galician situation as a result of a victorious assault on the Russians north of Zlocrow.

The English press is interested keenly in the German promises of a change in tactics in submarine warfare and attaches considerable significance to the news that Admiral von Tirpitz is to have a vacation. This is interpreted as indicating that Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg has won a definite victory over his naval colleague in the German cabinet.

Chinese Vice President Quits.

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 2.—Li Yuen Hung has resigned as vice president of China. The interpretation placed on his act is that it is preparatory to the establishment of a monarchy which is popularly regarded as virtually certain.

"BATTERING RAM" OF GERMAN ARMY SENT AGAINST RIGA

GEN. VON BESELER

The official announcement from Berlin that the army of General von Bissler, released by the fall of Novogeorgiewsk, has been dispatched to the north wing of the front and has appeared opposite Friedrichstadt, on the Dvina, between Riga and Dvinsk, produced much interest in London. It is taken to mean that despite the development of the new offensive in the south toward Odessa and the Black sea ports, there is to be no relaxation of the effort to secure the line of the Dvina in the north. General von Bressler, known as the "battering ram," has won fame because heretofore he invariably has been placed in command of besieging forces because of his skill in handling the German heavy artillery, the 12 centimeters and 30.5 centimeters. Military men are wondering whether he has taken his heavy artillery with him into the Courland swamps, and if so, what this portends.

AUTOISTS TO HOLD SESSION; RUN IS BEING PLANNED

Members Will Get Together at the Yough House; Road Work to be Discussed.

A social session of the Connellsville Automobile Club will be held at the Yough House this evening when the members will get together for the first time in several months. Some business will be transacted, principally as concerns the proposed club run. This run may be held on Labor Day, although nothing definite has yet been decided. Where and when are the two questions up to the members to decide among themselves.

There is a strong sentiment in favor of a basket picnic to Jasper Augustine's place in Addison, to be joined in by the Confluence autoists, a club being in process of formation there. There is some opposition to this by members who feel that their cars would be overworked if required to pull the Summit hill. Those who don't favor Addison suggested Ligonier. It will be up to the membership.

Reports on what has been accomplished along the line of good roads during the summer will be heard. The club has been particularly fortunate in getting road projects launched in this section. Several speakers will be on hand to give the autoists talks on subjects of interest to them.

BANDITS FIRE TRESTLE

Troops Seek Mexicans Who Set Bridge on Fire.

By Associated Press.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 2.—United States troops today were trailing a band of Mexican raiders who set fire to and partly burned a railroad trestle 14 miles north of here shortly after midnight. Special troop trains from Brownsville, Harlingen and San Benito were hurried to the scene about 2 o'clock this morning. Reports at 10 o'clock said the Mexicans had not been overtaken.

A party of Americans traveling from Brownsville to San Benito in an auto, who passed the trestle a short while before it was set on fire, reported that they had been fired upon by a band of between 25 and 30 Mexicans.

The trestle was fired shortly after the regular midnight passenger train had passed, indicating, officers believed, that the band had no desire to endanger the train or its passengers.

BREAKING CAMP.

Greensburg Athletes Start for Home; Local Boys Return Saturday.

The Greensburg football players who have had a training camp at Rogers Mills for the past three weeks, broke camp this morning. Signals and other football tactics have been worked and the eleven are ready for the opening of the season.

The boys of the local high school who have established a camp of their own at Rogers Mills will return Saturday evening. Coach H. M. Springer is in the valley with them now.

PAINTING BRIDGE ARCHES.

West Penn Adding Artistic Touches to Yough Structure.

The West Penn line force is repainting the arches that support the trolley line on the Yough bridge. Two coats of paint are being applied, one of red and one of black.

The last painting to be done by the Connellsville Iron Works on the bridge is also being finished. The sheetiron that borders the new walk is being given a black coat of paint.

1916 VALUATIONS SATISFACTORY TO PROPERTY OWNERS

Only One Application Made for Appeal Blank So Far.

FEW PROTESTS ARE HEARD

Assessor Thomas on Hand to Make Note of Transfer of Properties or Clerical Errors That May Creep In; Now List of Assessments Is Given.

So far only one application for blanks upon which to make appeals from the 1916 assessment has been made to the city clerk. More will follow but it is not expected that there will be anything like the storm of protests that kept the board of revision busy for almost a week last December.

Assessor E. O. Thomas was at city hall all day yesterday taking notes upon the claims of taxables who came in, mostly to give information of transfers of properties. Notices were sent out in all instances to the addresses of the properties assessed. This complies with the law. It is stated, and where owners are out of town it is the duty of agents to look out for the notices and apply to the assessors for them if they are not received.

A further list of valuations follows and a more complete list of the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh wards will be given later:

New System Adopted by the Official Board Will be Put Into Effect After Stirring Meeting.

Beginning next Sunday, which will be "Go to Church Day" for the Methodists of Connellsville, a campaign to last the entire month of September, in the interests of a new financial plan, will be inaugurated. The official board of the church has adopted this new plan and will introduce it to the congregation.

The campaign will came to a close on the afternoon of Wednesday, September 22, with a campaign of the membership by 100 men in teams of two. This will be conducted between the hours of 4 and 6 and the members will be urged to remain at home in expectation of the committees' visit. At 7:15 the canvassers will make their report to the congregation.

A schedule of the month's meetings follows:

MISSING SINCE 1888

Brother Asks Court to Rule That Smothers Is Legally Dead.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, Sep. 2.—When Wm. Smothers walked out of the house of his brother, Robert Smothers, at Pittsburg in 1888, with the avowed intention to go to St. Louis to "get himself a wife," that was the last time that he has been seen or heard of, according to the testimony of the brother and other members of the family, given before Judge J. C. Work of the orphans' court this morning.

The brother is trying to secure letters of administration to sell certain property left by the mother, Mrs. Susan Ann Smothers, at South Brownsville. The hearing this morning is for the purpose of declaring William Smothers legally dead, he having been unheard of for more than the required time.

ITALY NEW BUYER OF CONNELLSVILLE COKE FROM ABROAD

Shutting Off Foreign Supply Expected to Boom Shipments.

SOME TONNAGE ALREADY MOVES

Contracts Aggregating Thousands of Tons Are Being Negotiated With Many Consumers Abroad; Italian Government Is Not a Customer.

Italy is the latest consumer of Connellsville coke, according to reports of export sales made by producers of this region. A cargo of 5,800 tons from the Connellsville Consolidated Coke Company was shipped from the Baltimore docks last week, consigned to Italian ports. As in the case of former cargoes sold to foreign consumers, the transaction is made through jobbers, so that the local producers do not know the real consignees. It is thought that the purchasers are private interests and not the Italian government.

It is stated that this is the first consignment of Connellsville coke to find its way to Italy. Local selling agencies have shipped coal to Italy, but no coke. There have been preliminary obstacles, such as financial arrangements, that have prevented a ready course of trade and also a difficulty in obtaining vessels. The financing has been arranged, but shippers are still having a hard time in securing vessels for the trans-Atlantic trade.

Advices are that contracts aggregating thousands of tons of coke for European use are in the air. Connellsville operators have been asked to bid on these contracts and a healthy portion of this foreign tonnage is practically assured. The Connellsville region is a natural field for shipment to the coast points, an operator said recently. The run from the region to any of the seaboard ports is comparatively short. The best outlets of the Connellsville region are via the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to the Curtis Bay coal piers at Baltimore, the Western Maryland docks at the same place, and the Pennsylvania piers at either Baltimore or Philadelphia. Some tonnage also goes to the St. George piers of the Baltimore & Ohio at Staten Island, and the Canton docks of the Pennsylvania. That a rush shipment to catch an ocean going vessel at Baltimore could be made in three days is the statement of a railroad man.

Work on establishing a regular course of trade between this region and South America goes forward. There have been several cargoes shipped to the Argentine Republic and to Chile, and other contracts will be closed when business communication is better established. A new market has been established for the low-grade coke, that is coke which is high in sulphur, in the smelting furnaces of Chile. There the heat element is most important and the sulphur content does not seriously interfere with its availability, as it would in blast furnace use.

BELL OFFICIALS HERE

Two Parties in Town, But Not About the Conduit.

Connellsville was visited by two separate delegations of Bell Telephone officials yesterday and neither knew of the other's presence. The visits had no special significance it was stated and were not in connection with the proposed conduit on Pittsburg street. This matter is in the hands of the way department and none of the visitors yesterday were from this end.

W. W. Henderson, district commercial superintendent at Pittsburg and chief of all departments of the Pittsburg district, accompanied by L. J. Billingsley, district manager at Greensburg, spent a short time inspecting the Connellsville plant during the afternoon.

R. C. Hollister, plant supervisor of Greensburg, and R. L. Snyder, plant engineer, of Pittsburg, accompanied by several other officials passed through the city late in the afternoon. They had been looking over South Pittsburg street where it is proposed to spend $15,000 to improve the overhead system if the conduit proposition fails.

Child Has Blood Poison.

DR. PRATT CHIEF OF THE BUREAU OF FOREIGN TRADE

DR. EDWARD E. PRATT

Dr. Edward E. Pratt is the chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. He has been instrumental in advancing the foreign trade of this country. Now Dr. Pratt is interested in an aggressive campaign to obtain for American business a share in the development of the enormous resources of China. The plan contemplates the development of an American vested interest in China that will insure the United States a fair share of that country's foreign trade and be powerful enough to take care of itself in the complicated political commercial situation there.

CONNELLSVILLE DAY DRAWS MANY FOLKS TO SHADY GROVE

Joe Nirella's Band Is Chief Attraction; Last Appearance for Season.

Connellsville Day at Shady Grove is drawing large crowds to the popular amusement place this afternoon. There will be a big crowd from here at the park to see the fireworks display tonight. Joe Nirella's band is the principal attraction on the program. It will be the last appearance of this band at the park this season.

The band arrived in town this morning and gave a parade. After dinner at the Smith House the band proceeded to the park. It gave a concert there and then took up the task of playing for half the dances.

Manager R. S. Coyle declared today that the fireworks display will be the best he has ever staged at the park. Connellsville has always liberally supported the park, especially on days set apart for this particular town, and today promises to be no exception.

VETERANS TO MEET

Fifty of Fayette's Heroes Have Died Since the Last Reunion.

About 600 invitations are out for the annual reunion of the Fayette County Veterans Association, to be held in Uniontown on Thursday, September 16. Since the reunion of September 24, 1914, the deaths of 37 veterans have been recorded and it is believed that those who died in remote districts of the county or former members no longer residing in Pennsylvania would increase the number to 50.

Among those who died during the year were Smith Dawson, A. Shallenberger, Ephriam Dixon, Alfred Hood, J. W. Haines, John Nicholson, of Connellsville; Henry McKnight, Thomas Herwick of Dawson; Dr. H. Y. Brady, C. A. Daniels, John Farnworth of Ohiopyle; A. J. Thompson of Smithfield; George B. Shaffer of near Vanderbilt; L. A. Kimmel of Perryopolis; Emzi Miller and Elijah Ellenberger of Dunbar.

The enrollment of veterans will begin at 8 o'clock at the city hall, at which time badges will be distributed. The business meeting will commence at 10 o'clock and at 2:30 o'clock the campfire will commence in the municipal hall.

REPAIRING OLD CARS

Railroads Anticipate Brisk Fall Rush of Grain and Merchandise.

Anticipating great shipments of grain and merchandise, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Western Maryland railroads are preparing to put every available car into service. To that end cars stored on sidings are being repaired and made ready for use. Repair forces are also being increased.

The expected increase in freight traffic will also mean the taking back of hundreds of furloughed men, it is said, and the advancement of men who were put back during the retrenchment period.

Brakemen, yardmen and switchmen are in demand, according to reports from Cumberland and Baltimore, and it is said that more telegraphers could be used too.

Ammonia Explodes.

A cylinder of ammonia at the Royal Ice Company's plant on the West Side burst yesterday afternoon. No one was hurt.

Manicuring Water Street.

The city street force is using the street sweeper on Water street today.

TEACHERS PREPARE TO OPEN SCHOOLS TUESDAY MORNING

Special Examinations Have Been Arranged for Tomorrow.

NEW FRESHMEN ALSO TO MEET

Courses Will Be Mapped Out at Conference With Principal Smith; Annual Confab of Instructors and School Directors Set for Monday.

Preparations are about completed for the opening of the 1915-1916 term of the Connellsville public schools next Tuesday, September 7. Members of the incoming Freshman class of the high school will meet Principal B. B. Smith in the assembly room at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. At the same time grade pupils who have been granted the privilege of re-examination, or out-of-town pupils who have to stand entrance examinations, will meet in the Fourth Ward building.

On Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock the annual meeting of teachers and directors will be held in the high school assembly room. Following that session there will be a teachers' meeting and conferences between the grade principals and their teachers.

All of the pupils will report to the rooms to which they have been promoted at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning, except those of the Sixth grade in the Fourth Ward. This grade has been broken up, part of the pupils being assigned to the same grade in the South Side, Third Ward and Second Ward buildings. Some pupils residing in the neighborhood of Francis avenue will be assigned to the Third Ward building instead of the Second, this year.

All of the schools have been repaired, cleaned and fumigated during the summer months and they are in readiness for use when the term opens. Collier of Uniontown which took place last evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride in East Patterson avenue in the presence of relatives and intimate friends of the two families. Previous to the ceremony Miss Martha Eaton sang "O Promise Me." As the bridal party entered the living room, where the ceremony was performed before a bower of ferns and clematis, Miss Helen Eckert of Uniontown, played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin and during the ceremony she softly played Traumerei. The impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. G. L. C. Richardson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church. NEGROES DECLARE WIFE HIRED THEM TO KILL DR. MOHR Widow of Murdered Providence Man Is Arrested by the Police.

THREE MEN ARE ALSO JAILED

According to Their Confession, Wife Told Them to Shoot Emily Burger or Anybody in Tonneau; Offered Them $5,000 for Deed, Is Claim.

By Associated Press.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 2—Mrs Elizabeth Mohr, wife of the physician who was fatally shot on an automobile trip from this city to Newport, was arrested today after three negroes had signed a written confession saying that Mrs Mohr had hired them to kill the doctor. The negroes are charged with murder. They are George W. Healis, the chauffeur who was driving Dr. Mohr's car at the time of the shooting; C. V. Brown, formerly employed by Dr Mohr, and Henry Stellman, a half-brother of Brown.

No specific charge has been brought against Mrs. Mohr, who vehemently denied the accusations. Healis has been detained by the police since the shooting as his account of the affair conflicted with that given by Miss Emily Burger, the doctor's assistant, who was in the automobile and was also wounded.

According to Brown's story, as given out by the police, Mrs. Mohr proposed several weeks ago that he kill Dr. Mohr promising to pay him $5,000 nine days after the killing was accomplished. He says he asked Stellman to help him out, and brought his half brother up to talk the matter over with Mrs. Mohr.

The arrangements for the shooting were carried out in detail, according to the confession. At a designated spot on the Navatt road, Healis stalled the engine of the automobile and Brown and Spellman, who had approached on motorcycles, crept through the bushes and fired at the occupants of the car. Brown said he shot Dr Mohr and Spellman wounded Miss Burger. After the shooting Brown and Spellman threw their revolvers into a brook near the Rhode Island Country Club and went back to the motorcycles.

Brown said Mrs Mohr told him to be sure and kill the doctor and to kill Miss Burger of he could. His instructions, he said, were to shoot anybody in the tonneau, whether it was Miss Burger or Florence Ormsby, a maid employed in Dr. Mohr's office.

APPEARED AS IF SCHOOL HOUSE WAS BEING BURNED

Youngsters Around Scottdale Had Imagination Greatly Stimulated

BY SOME FIRES BLAZING

But It Was Only a Corn Roast Being Held in the Field Back of the School Building Where Lessons Will Be Resumed Next Monday.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, Sept. 2.—There were about 250 people present at the corn roast at the White school house, and it was the biggest affair of that kind ever held in the neighborhood. There were ten big bonfires, some of them a dozen feet high, that lighted the surrounding country and gave the juveniles the delight of imagining that the school house was being burned down. A pit 10 feet across and three feet deep was used for roasting and boiling the corn. There were two big kettles full of boiled corn, butter and salt wholesale, sandwiches of several varieties, and lots of watermelons. There were 15 auto loads besides many who walked or drove, and the jolly crowdk remained until 1 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gilchrist and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Graft were the chaperones, and there were also several other married couples present.

EVERSON NUPTIALS.

While here he was train dispatcher for the Pennsylvania railroad at Everson. Later he moved to Wilkinsburg and then to Derry.

AT THE TABERNACLE.

A crowded house greeted the evangelist as he spoke on "Leprosy in Scottdale." He showed that there were many moral lepers in Scottdale. This sermon was one of the most interesting of any of his addresses. The service opened with a beautiful baptismal service, which was followed by a very inspiring song service, conducted by Prof. J. V. Baird. The mixed quartet sang "What Did He Do?" and just preceding the sermon Mrs. Smith sang a very beautiful solo entitled "I'll Go All the Way With Jesus." At the close of the service Mr. Wight sang a very touching solo, illustrated with stereoptics, entitled "Ninety and Nine."

Tonight Rev. Minges will speak on the subject, "God's Call to Man." Friday night will be young people's night and there will be an unusually interesting service. The evangelist will show a number of views of China, India and Africa, which will be explained by Miss May Castle, the missionary worker with the evangelistic company. Saturday night the evangelist will preach on the subject "Shall We Know Each Other in Heaven?" Special announcement was made of the great mass meeting for both men and women on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Evangelist Minges will deliver his famous address on "Booze." Sunday night the subject will be "Christian Union From a Business Man's Standpoint."

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

The problem of foreign exchange is puzzling to the experts The supremacy of the American dollar as a basic value was to be expected because of our commercial situation, but financiers are frankly surprised at the sinking value of the English pound sterling

Perhaps the explanation may be found in the fact that British credit is declining in the sense that the public is becoming frightened at the appalling cost of the European war and capital is beginning to fear repudiation in the final settlement In short, there is a growing impression that if the war continues much longer the nations will be so hopelessly in debt that it will take many years to liquidate it and that under such circumstances there may be new governments and new policies as to the payment of war debts The repudiation of such indebtedness is not uncommon Some of the American states have been guilty of it, notably Virginia though the action was subsequently reconsidered by that state

If it should be found that such conditions are depressing the value of foreign currency the fact will have great weight in determining a settlement of the war The destruction of credit may bring the belligerents to terms where the destruction of life and property have failed.

A joint committee of British and French bankers are coming to the country to discuss the situation and try to find a remedy In this they will be assisted by American bankers The situation is one which has a lively interest for this country The war rescued us from a period of profound industrial and financial depression Its conclusion as well as its continuation are fraught with all manner of possibilities for good or evil to us and the destruction of foreign exchange values if not an actual evil is a distinct menace

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS.

The voluminous and conflicting reports of the Committee on Industrial Relations, which for three years has been taking testimony indiscriminately and impertinently, leave the matter of industrial relations practically where it was when they began

The committee was composed of theoretical reformers and political climbers The former did not know how to apply their knowledge practically and the latter didn't seek the truth save where it served their advancement

The problems of our industrial relations will have to be worked out in the customary manner through the natural agencies that function through the experience of employers and employed and such conservative legislative action as it seems from time to time to suggest

ADMITS RIEPPER'S ELECTION.

The Uniontown News Standard chief Democratic organ of Fayette county, admits that the judicial contest is all over but counting the vote It says

Having handed the judicial nomination and election to Stolen Goods Report, here's hoping that the Democratic lawyers at this bar are satisfied!"

Ever now and then the Republican editor of the Democratic Standard tells the truth That is what his Republican training has done for him

"There will be no charge laid against the Democratic leaders that they have spent the entire summer inducing good candidates to withdraw" says the veracious Uniontown Standard There will not The Democratic leaders didn't have to coax candidates off they had to coax them on The Democratic nominations have for the most part gone begging chiefly because the Democratic prospects of success this fall are not worth thirty cents on the dollar.

Brownsville authorities have called in the State Constabulary to aid them in putting a stop to automobile speeding Brownsville is built on the hillside. Perhaps the speeders can't help going fast down hill. However, they ought to make a decent average coming back

There are thirteen candidates for the Republican nominations for County Commissioner but all of them can't be elected Connellsville has fourteen candidates for Council. The bars were down.

The registration in Connellsville as elsewhere in Fayette county indicates an overwhelming Republican majority this fall Anything else would be a sad reflection upon the intelligence of the citizens.

Machiavelli

By GEORGE PITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

Machiavelli was a much misjudged Italian who would smile contentedly for the first time in 400 years if he could get a look at the remains of international law just now

He was born in Florence in 1469 and after obtaining a fair education went into politics at the age of twenty-four and got a city appointment Politics in Italy at that time was as risky an occupation as aeroplaning The man who played the game only stayed up a little while and usually got killed coming down Notwithstanding this fact Machiavelli succeeded in staying in politics in Florence for forty-three years before he was banished While his fame is not based on this fact it constituted a world's record up to that time and should not be overlooked

Machiavelli had the job of organizing the Florence militia While doing this he studied statecraft Florentine statecraft included a conscientious use of murder arson and plain ruination in its various branches and the statesman who could not drop a package of rat poison into the wine of a bumptious minority leader was a pale failure

Machiavelli dodged trouble for a long

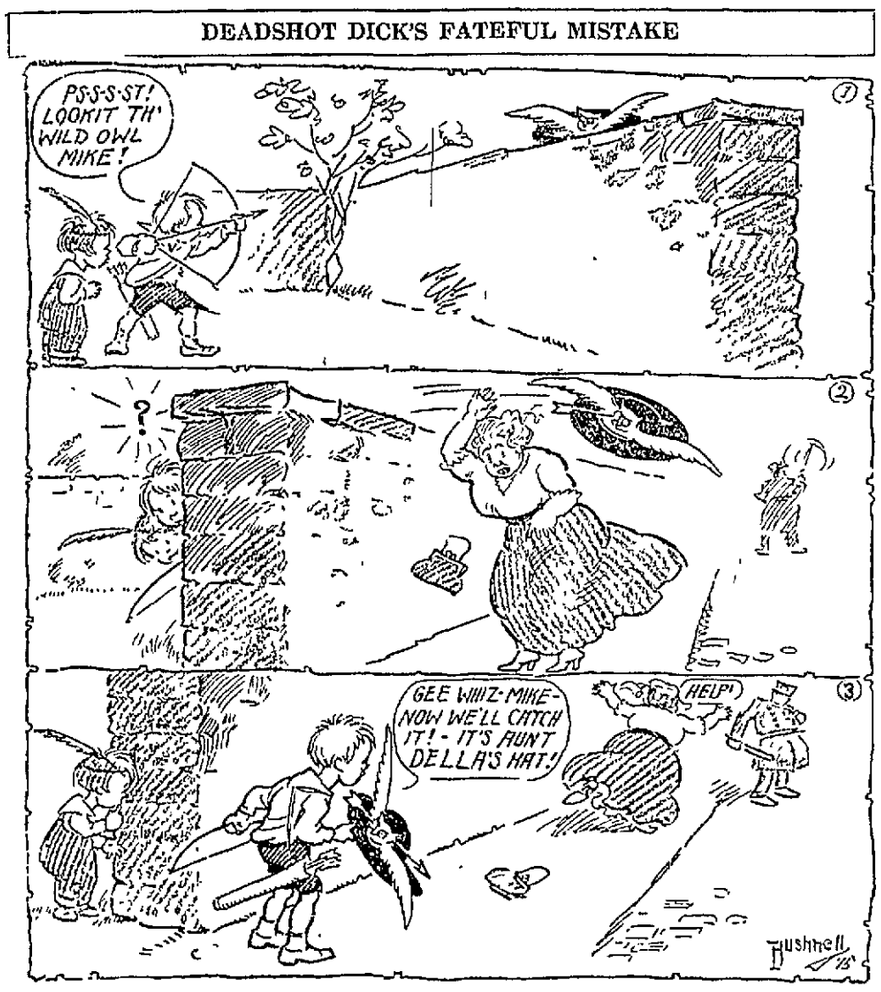

An adjective used to describe anything slightly worse than devilish

time but it came plentiful at last He was tortured by the Medicis and fled from Florence with a loud report This did not offend him because it was all in the name of statesmanship But it took him twelve years to get up enough nerve to go back for politics In the meantime he wrote plays poems, essays and a number of books on Italian politics One of these was The Prince It was a slim volume full of such shocking recipes for building a kingdom that Machiavellian has become an adjective used to describe anything slightly worse than devilish

This was a great injustice to Machiavelli for he was a kind man who did not believe in Greek fire or poisoned gases In fact he would be a little too soft-hearted to be of much use in a modern war

Machiavelli's theory was that the state was too big and important to conform to petty rules of humanity or morality or honesty, which were only invented for common people It has taken three hundred years for the world to understand this theory, but it seems to be absorbing it rapidly now and we may expect to see a good many statues of this great man erected in the next few years

At the Theatres.

A SCENE FROM "KICK IN."

COLONIAL THEATRE.

"KICK IN."

Opportunity to secure seats for that sensationally successful play "Kick In," which comes to the Colonial Theatre Thursday, September 7, will be offered theatregoers of this city Saturday at 9 A. M. Ever since it was first announced that "Kick In" was scheduled, interest has steadily increased, for everyone is anxious to witness the play which made such a profound impression in New York as to compel it to remain on Broadway for a solid year. It is said that no comedy-drama of recent years offers as many excuses for wholesome laughter and wholesome thrills and he must be a hardened man of the world who could sit through its four engrossing acts without experiencing a tingling sensation along the spine.

"AFTERMATH," portrays the upward struggle of two young Americans, husband and wife, from the depths of poverty and despair to the heights of prosperity and happiness, in the midst of which they are confronted by the tragic past of the young wife, which she believed to be buried. For a time the vortex of shame threatens to engulf both, but dominant love finally lifts them above the menace of the past. The play is splendidly enacted by the famous leading lady, Virginia Pearson, supported by the popular photoplay star, Owen Moore, and a consistently capable cast. This feature along with the very latest Pathe News will be the attraction at the Colonial today, matinee and night. Saturday, "Brother Officers," a five part feature, and the Travel Series will be shown. The "Arab" will be shown Monday.

AT THE GLOBE.

"THE MYSTERY OF MARY."—Betty Grey, the versatile Vitagraph star, is today appearing in "The Mystery of Mary," a three act Broadway feature. The story is beautiful and interesting and the production is meeting with great success. "Divided Locket," a Biograph drama, featuring Augusta Anderson; "The Little Prospector," and Essanay drama with Margaret Clayton in the leading role, ably assisted by G. M. Anderson; a Comedy, "A Cute Little Bear," and "Mr Jarr's and Gertrude's Beaux," a Vitagraph comedy, completes the bill. "Vain Justice," a powerful drama, is a fine attraction, tomorrow. The picture is an Essanay drama in two acts, presenting Richard Travers and Lillian Drew.

SOISSON THEATRE.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY."—The eighth episode of "The Diamond From the Sky" is the attraction at the Soisson Theatre today. Lottie Pickford is the bright particular star of this production and is looking good. The exciting two reel Gold Seal drama, "A Fiery Instruction," has Cleo Madison in the leading role. This talented little lady is very popular and all the plays she is connected with are good. Lon Chaney appears today in the Bee drama, "Quits." It is a thrilling drama of the wild western country. The Imp comedy-drama, "The Country Girl," is the story of a young girl's trials in New York and their successful termination. Tomorrow the ninth episode of the "Romance of Elaine" will be presented. Saturday William A. Brady will offer Alec B. Francis as "Tom," in his greatest of all successes, "After Dark."

"That's a long time since we fared to see you, Mus' Walter," said he; "that's a right long time! And now here's a nice kettle of fish for you to find! But I seen the man, Mus' Walter, and we'll bring that home to him, never you fear!"

"Are you sure that you saw him?" asked Blanche, already under Cazalet's influence on this point.

Savage looked cautiously toward the house before replying; then he lowered his voice dramatically. "Sure, Miss Blanche. Why, I see him that night as plain as I fare to see Mus' Walter now!"

"I should have thought it was too dark to see anybody properly," said Blanche, and Cazalet nodded vigorously to himself.

"Dark, Miss Blanche? Why, there was broad daylight, and if that wasn't there were the lodge lights on to see him by!" His stage voice fell a sepulchral semitone. "But I see him again at the station this very afternoon, I did! I promised not to talk about that—you'll keep that a secret if I tell 'e somethin'?—but I picked him out of half a dozen at the first time of askin'!"

Savage said this with a pleased and vacuous grin, looking Cazalet full in the face, his rheumy eyes were red as the sunset they faced; and Cazalet drew a deep breath as Blanche and he turned back toward the river.

"First time of prompting, I expect!" he whispered. "But there's hope if Savage is their strongest witness."

"Only listen to that dog," said Blanche, as they passed the yard.

Finger-Prints.

Hilton Toye was the kind of American who knew London as well as most Londoners, and some other capitals a good deal better than their respective citizens of corresponding intelligence. His travels were mysteriously but enviably interwoven with business; he had an air of enjoying himself, and at the same time making money to pay for his enjoyment, wherever he went. His hotel days were much the same all over Europe: many appointments, but abundant leisure. All, however, he never spoke about his own affairs unless they were also those of the listener—and not always then—half his acquaintances had no idea how he made his money, and the other half wondered how he spent his time. Of his mere interests, which were many, Toye made no such secret; but it was quite impossible to deduce a main industry from the by-products of his level headed versatility.

Criminology, for example, was an obvious by-product; it was no morbid taste in Hilton Toye, but a scientific hobby that appealed to his mental subtlety. And subtle he was, yet with strange simplicities; grave and dignified, yet addicted to the expressive phraseology of his less enlightened countrymen; naturally sincere, and yet always capable of some ingenuous duplicity.

The appeal of a Blanche Macnair to such a soul needs no analysis. She had struck through all complexities to the core, such as it was or as she might make it. As yet she could only admire the character the man had shown, though it had upset her none the less. At Enzelberg he had proposed to her "inside of two weeks," as he had admitted without compunction at the time. It had taken him, he said, about two minutes to make up his mind; but the following summer he had laid more deliberate siege, in accordance with some old idea that she had let fall to soften her first refusal. The result had been the same, only more explicit on both sides. She had denied him the least particle of hope, and he had warned her that she had not heard the last of him by any means, and never would till she married another man. This had incensed her at the time, but a great deal less on subsequent reflection; and such was the position between that pair when Toye and Cazalet landed in England from the same steamer.

On this second day ashore, as Cazalet sat over a late breakfast in Jermyn street, Toye sent in his card and was permitted to follow it, rather to his surprise. He found his man frankly divided between kidneys and bacon and the morning paper, but in a hearty mood, indicative of amends for his great heat in yesterday's argument. A plainer indication was the downright yet sunny manner in which Cazalet at once returned to the contentious topic.

"Well, my dear Toye, what do you think of it now?"

"I was going to ask you what you thought, but I guess I can see from your face."

"I think the police are rotters for not getting him free last night!"

"Scruton?"

"Yes. Of course, the case'll break down when it comes on next week, but they oughtn't to wait for that. They've no right to detain a man in custody when the bottom's out of their case already."

"But—but the papers claim they've found the very things they were searching for.' Toye looked nonplussed, as well he might, by an apparently perverse jubilation over such intelligence.

"They haven't found the missing cap!" crowed Cazalet. "What they have found is Craven's watch and keys, and the silver-mounted truncheon that killed him. But they found them in a place where they couldn't possibly have been put by the man identified as Scruton!"

"Say, where was that?" asked Toye with great interest. "My paper only says the things were found, not where."

"No more does mine, but I can tell you, because I helped to find 'em."

"You don't say!"

"You'll never grasp where," continued Cazalet. "In the foundations under the house!"

Details followed in all fullness; the listener might have had a part in the Uplands act of yesterday's drama, might have played in the library scene with his adored Miss Blanche, so vividly was every minute of that crowded hour brought home to him. He was not so sure that he had any very definite conception of the foundations of an English house.

"Ours were like over so many little tiny rooms," said Cazalet, "where I couldn't stand nearly upright even as a small boy without giving my head a crack against the ground floors. They led into one another by a lot of little manholes—tight fits even for a boy, but nearly fatal to the boss police man yesterday!"

Hilton Toye, edging in his word, said he guessed he visualized—but just where had those missing things been found?

"Three or four compartments from the first one under the library," said Cazalet.

"Did you find them?"

"Well, I kicked against the truncheon, but Drinkwater dug it up. The watch and keys were with it."

"Say, were they buried?"

"Only in the loose rubble and brick-dusty stuff that you get in foundations."

"Say, that's bad! That murderer must have known something, or else it's a bully fluke in his favor."

"I don't follow you, Toye."

"I'm thinking of finger-prints. If he'd just've laid those things right down, he'd have left the print of his hand as large as life for Scotland Yard."

"The devil he would!" exclaimed Cazalet. "I wish you'd explain," he added; "remember I'm a wild man from the woods, and only know of these things by the vaguest kind of hearsay and stray paragraphs in the papers. I never knew you could leave your mark so easily as all that."

Toye took the breakfast menu and placed it face downward on the tablecloth. "Lay your hand on that, palm down," he said, "and don't move it for a minute."

Cazalet looked at him a moment before complying, then his fine, shapely, sunburnt hand lay still as plaster under their eyes until Toye told him he might take it up. Of course there was no mark whatever, and Cazalet laughed.

"You should have caught me when I came up from those foundations, not fresh from my tub!" said he.

"You wait," replied Hilton Toye, taking the menu gingerly by the edge, and putting it out of harm's way in the empty toast-rack. "You can't see anything now, but if you come round to the Savoy I'll show you something."

"What?"

"Your prints, sir! I don't say I'm Scotland Yard at the game, but I can do it well enough to show you how it's done. You haven't left your mark upon the paper, but I guess you've left the sweat of your hand; if I know a little French chalk over it, the chalk'll stick where your hand did, and blow off easily everywhere else. Say, come round to lunch and I'll have your prints ready for you. I'd like awfully to show you how it's done."

Cazalet excused himself with decision. He had a full morning in front of him. He was going to see Miss Macnair's brother, son of the late head of his father's old firm of solicitors, and now one of the partners, to get them either to take up Scruton's case themselves, or else to recommend a firm perhaps more accustomed to criminal practice. Cazalet was always apt to be elaborate in the first person singular, either in the past or in the future tense; but he was more so than usual in explaining his considered intentions in this matter that lay so very near his heart.

"Going to see Scruton, too?" said Toye.

"Not necessarily," was the short reply. But it also was elaborated by Cazalet on a moment's consideration. The fact was that he wanted first to know if it were not possible, by the intervention of a really influential lawyer, to obtain the prisoner's immediate release, at any rate on bail. If impossible, he might hesitate to force himself on Scruton in the prison, but he would see.

"It's a perfect scandal that he should be there at all," said Cazalet, as he rose first and ushered Toye out into the lounge. "Only think: our old gardener saw him run out of the drive at half past seven, when the gong went, when the real murderer must have been shivering in the Michael-Angelo cupboard, wondering how the devil he was ever going to get out again."

"Then you think old man Craven—begging his poor pardon—was getting out some cigars when the man, whoever he was, came in and knocked him on the head?"

Cazalet nodded vigorously. "That's the likeliest thing of all!" he cried. "Then the gong went—there may even have come a knock at the door—and there was that cupboard standing open at his elbow."

"With a hole in the floor that might have been made for him?"

"As it happens, yes; he'd search every inch like a rat in a trap, you see; and there it was as I'd left it twenty years before."

"Well, it's a wonderful yarn!" exclaimed Hilton Toye, and he lighted the cigar that Cazalet had given him.

"I think it may be thought one if the police ever own how they made their find," agreed Cazalet, laughing and looking at his watch. Toye had never heard him laugh so often. "By the way, Drinkwater doesn't want any of all this to come out until he's dragged his man before the beak again."

"Which you mean to prevent?"

"If only I can! I more or less promised not to talk, however, and I'm sure you won't. You know so much already, you may just as well know the rest this week as well as next, if you don't mind keeping it to yourself."

Nobody could have minded this particular embargo less than Hilton Toye. He saw Cazalet off with a smile that was as yet merely puzzled, and not unfriendly until he had time to recall Miss Blanche's part in the strange affair of the previous afternoon.

Say, weren't they rather intimate, those two, even if they had known each other all their lives? He had it from Blanche (with her second refusal) that she was not, and never had been, engaged. And a fellow who only wrote to her once in a year—still, they must have been darned intimate, and this funny affair would bring them together again quicker than anything.

Say, what a funny affair it was when you came to think of it! Funny all through, it now struck Toye; beginning on board ship with that dream of Cazalet's about the murdered man landing to all that talk of the old grievance against him, and culminating in his actually finding the implements of the crime in his inspired efforts to save the man of whose innocence he was so positive. Say, if that Cazalet had not been on his way home from Australia at the time!

Like many deliberate speakers, Toye thought like lightning, and had reached this point before he was a hundred yards from the hotel; then he thought of something else, and retraced his steps. He retraced them even to the table at which he had sat with Cazalet not very many minutes ago; the waiter was only now beginning to clear away.

"Say, waiter, what have you done with the menu that was in that toast-rack? There was something on it that we rather wanted to keep."

"I thought there was, sir," said the English waiter at that admirable hotel. Toye, however, prepared to talk to him like an American uncle of Dutch extraction, did.

"You thought that, and you took it away?"

"Not at all, sir. I 'appened to observe the other gentleman put the menu in his pocket, behind your back as you were getting up, because I passed a remark about it to the head waiter at the time!"

CHAPTER IX.

Fair Warning.

It was much more than a map of the metropolis that Toye carried in his able head. He knew the right places for the right things. He gazed critically at his boots. He was not so dead sure that he had struck the only man for boots. There had been a young fellow aboard the Kaiser Fritz, quite a little bit of a military blood, who had come ashore in a pair of cloth tops that had rather unsettled Mr. Toye's mind just on that one point.

Captain Aylmer had said he would like to have Toye see his club any time he was passing and cared to look in for lunch. He had said so as though he would like it a great deal, and suddenly Toye had a mind to take him at his word right now. The idea began with those boots with cloth tops, but that was not all there was to it; there was something else that had been at the back of Toye's mind all morning and now took charge in front.

Aylmer had talked some about a job in the war office that enabled him to lunch daily at the Rag; but what his job had been aboard a German steamer Toye did not know and was not the man to inquire. It was no business of his, anyway. Reference to a card, traded for his own in Southampton Water, and duly filled in his cigarette-case reminded him of the Rag's proper style and title. And there he was eventually entertained to a sound, workmanlike, rather expeditious meal.

"Say, did you see the cemetery at Genoa?" suddenly inquired the visitor on their way back through the hall. A martial bust had been admired extravagantly before the question.

"Never want to see it again, or Genoa either," said Captain Aylmer. "The smoking-room's this way."

"Did you say you were there two days?" Toye was cutting his cigar as though it were a corn.

"Two whole days, and we'd had a night in the Bay of Naples just before."

"Is that so? I only came aboard at Genoa. I guess I was wise," added Toye, as though he was thinking of something else. There was no sort of feeling in his voice, but he was sucking his left thumb.

"I say, you've cut yourself!"

"I guess it's nothing. Knife too sharp; please don't worry, Captain Aylmer. I was going to say I only set on at Genoa, and they couldn't give me a room to myself. I had to go in with Cazalet; that's how I saw so much of him."

It was Toye's third and separate independent attempt to introduce the name and fame of Cazalet as a natural topic of conversation. Twice his host had listened with adamantine politeness; this time he was enjoying quite the second-best liqueur brandy to be had at the Rag; and he leaned back in his chair.

"You were rather impressed with him, weren't you?" said Captain Aylmer. "Well, frankly, I wasn't, but it may have been my fault."

"I was only going to ask you one thing about Mr. Cazalet," Toye said "and I guess I've a reason for asking though there's no time to state it now. What did you think of him, Captain Aylmer, on the whole?"

"Ah, there you have me. 'On the whole' is just the difficulty," said Aylmer, answering the straight question readily enough. "I thought he was a very good chap as far as Naples, but after Genoa he was another being. I've sometimes wondered what happened in his three or four days ashore."

"Three or four, did you say?"

And at the last moment Toye would have played Wedding Guest to Aylmer's Ancient Mariner.

"Yes; you see, he knew these German boats waste a couple of days at Genoa, so he landed at Naples and did his Italy overland. Rather a good idea I thought, especially as he said he had friends in Rome; but we never heard of 'em beforehand, and I should have let the whole thing strike me a bit sooner if I'd been Cazalet. Seen enough to take a hand-bag and a toothbrush, eh? And I don't think I should have run it quite so fine at Genoa, either. But there are rum birds in this world, and always will be!"

Toye felt one himself as he picked his way through St. James' square. If it had not been just after lunch, he would have gone straight and had a cocktail, for of course he knew the only place for them. What he did was to slue round out of the square, and to obtain for the asking, at another old haunt, on Cockspur street, the latest little time-table of continental trains. This he carried, not on foot but in a taxi, to the Savoy Hotel, where it kept him busy in his own room for the best part of another hour. But by that time Hilton Toye looked more than an hour older than on sitting down at his writing-table with pencil, paper and the little book of trains; he looked horrified, he looked distressed, and yet he looked crafty, determined and immensely alive. He proceeded, however, to take some of the life out of himself, and to add still more to his apparent age, by repairing for more inward light to a Turkish bath.

Now the only Turkish bath, according to Hilton Toye's somewhat exclusive code, was not even a hundred yards from Cazalet's hotel; and there the visitor of the morning again presented himself before the afternoon; new merely a little worn, as a man will look after losing a stone an hour on a warm afternoon, and a bit blue again about the chin, which of course looked a little deeper and stronger on that account.

Cazalet was not in; his friend would wait, and in fact waited over an hour in the little lounge. An evening paper was offered to him; he took it listlessly, scarcely looked at it at first then tore it in his anxiety to find something he had quite forgotten—from the new manner end. But he was waiting artistically as before when Cazalet arrived in tremendous spirits.

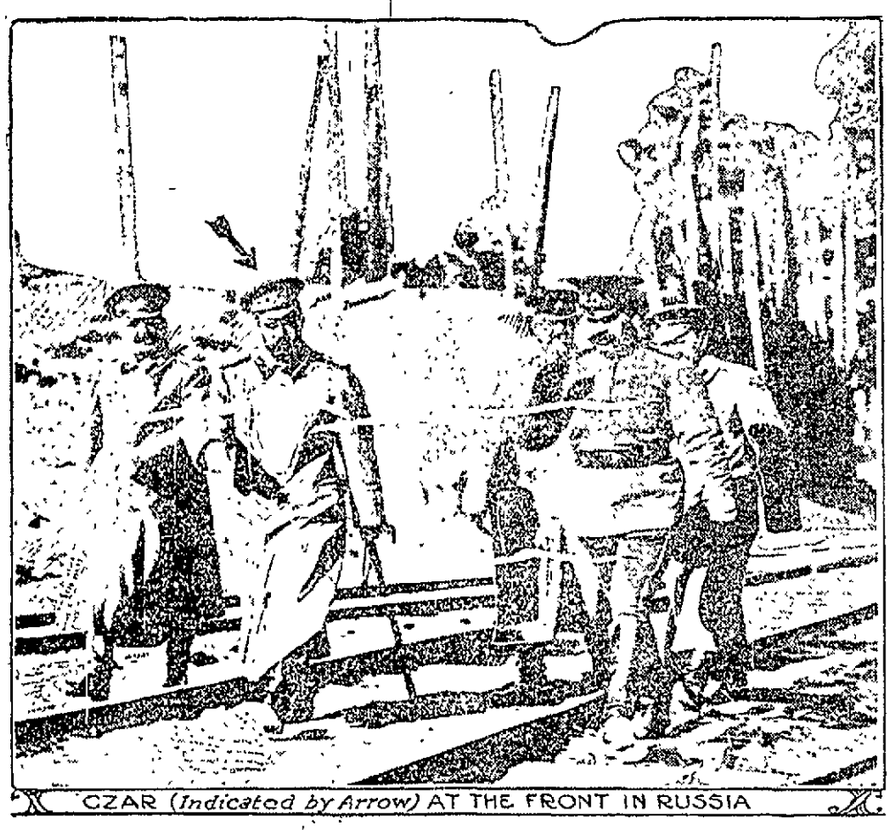

"Stop and dine!" he cried out at once.

"Sorry I can't; got to go and see somebody," said Hilton Toye.

"Then you must have a drink."

Victors Pile Up Four Runs by a Rally in Fifth.

TROTTER BOYS HAMMER BALL

Get 10 Clouts to Seven for United, But Are One Run Shy and Drop to Third Place in the Race for the Lynch Cup; Lose a Home Run.

Trotter lost by a 6-5 score in the game at United last evening, dropping to third place in the race for the Lynch cup. Labiak of Trotter deserved to win the game, which he pitched in fine style, and would probably have done so had Konko, Trotter's second baseman, touched the first bag when he rapped out what would have been a home run. The score was then 6-5 and Konko's run would have tied it, necessitating extra innings.

The lead in the game zigzagged all the way through. After the first inning both teams were tied and then Trotter got three in the third. In the fifth, however, United came back strong and took the lead by getting four, only to have the Trotter nine tally another one in the next inning, tieing the score. The winning run was made by United in the seventh and after that no more runs were made. The score:

The Art of Sewing and Dressmaking Taught in Stores

An effort is being made, in a way that counts, to reduce the high cost of living. The celebrated Pictorial Review Dressmaking School of New York has perfected a plan for teaching sewing and dressmaking in the principal stores of the country.

Expert teachers are sent from their main school in New York and those desiring to make their own clothes are given the opportunity of receiving the instructions at the very low price of $3.00 for a full course, which, in the past, has been obtainable only in New York, and at a price beyond the means of a large majority of the people.

These experts in style and teaching, also advise the pupil regarding the design best suited to her particular style and figure, and also the material from which the garment should be made.

A full course consists of six lessons of one and one-half hours each, and in that time the pupil is expected to make up a complete garment, part of the work being done at home after each lesson.

The instruction is thoroughly practical and the pupil makes as she learns. Previous experience is not necessary, for with the Pictorial Review Cutting and Construction Guides furnished with each pattern, pupils will easily and quickly be able to make smart dresses for themselves and others.

All the latest finishing touches in the art of dressmaking are taught each pupil by individual instruction.

The Pictorial Review School of Dressmaking at this Store Begins on September 13th.

Only one hundred pupils can be accomodated. As a goodly portion of these have already enrolled, it behooves you to waste no time in leaving your name at the pattern counter, if you wish to profit by advantages which this school offers. All materials and findings used by pupils must be purchased at this store. When classes begin, our Fall stocks of dress goods, silks, velvets, buttons, trimmings, etc., will all be complete and will afford the widest choice. We do pleating, tucking, and hemstitching—all at moderate prices. Instructions given also in fitting, and the correct use of patterns. Only $3.00 for the full course of six lessons.
